Report from the Executive Director

Plans are well underway for the 2007 SBE annual meeting. As usual, we will meet immediately prior to the Academy of Management meetings in Philadelphia. This year, the Westin Philadelphia, which is just a few blocks from the Convention Center location for the AoM, will host our meeting. Group rates are available from July 31 through August 8, but you must make your reservation before July 5.

Richard Nielsen has done an excellent job as program chair putting together another outstanding line-up of papers, panels, and presentations. We think this will another outstanding conference planned and we hope you can join us.

Again this year, we will rely on the good work of the Philosophy Documentation Center to organize our registration. For your convenience, PDC has established an on-line registration site; it can be found at: http://www.pdcenet.org/2007-SBE-Conference.html. A mail-in form is also provided in this newsletter.

For the first time we will also have online hotel registration available. The Westin Philadelphia has provided a page for our conference, which can be found in the box below.

Our groups rates are available from July 31-August 8, so those planning to attend the AoM meetings can remain at one hotel with attractive group rates. The recently renovated Westin is a beautiful hotel located just a short work from the Convention center that will host the AoM meetings. Reservations must be made by July 5 to guarantee our group rate.

Our own SBE website has links available to both the conference and hotel registration site, as well as a downloadable copy of the preliminary program for the meeting. The website can be found at www.societyforbusinessethics.org

Last year a record of almost 200 people attended our annual meeting. Two years ago in Hawaii, we established a record with more than 40 attendees from outside the US. With historic Philadelphia providing the background, let's aim to break both attendance records this year. Come, please join us in Philly!

Joe DesJardins
Executive Director

Online hotel registration available is NOW available at

Links to online conference and hotel registration have also been posted on the SBE website at.

If you prefer the old fashioned way, please contact the Westin Philadelphia directly to make a guest room reservation. Please identify yourself as attending the Society for Business Ethics meeting. (Tel: 215-563-1600)
In each issue of the SBE Newsletter, the Committee on International Collaboration (CIC) will ask colleague organizations around the world to share information about their association and activities. The CIC hopes that these materials will create broader awareness of the work of our global colleagues and might offer SBE members opportunities for participation and collaboration of which they might not have been previously aware. If you would like to suggest an organization to include, please email Laura Hartman at LHartman@depaul.edu. Our next profile is of the Australian Association for Professional and Applied Ethics.

Australian Association for Professional and Applied Ethics

The Australian Association for Professional and Applied Ethics (AAPAE) grew out of a conference on Teaching Applied Ethics held in Sydney in 1992. Academics and professionals from many different backgrounds met together, found a great deal of common ground, profited from their interchanges, and were eager to meet again on a regular basis. The next step was to form an association which could bring together people normally separated by traditional discipline boundaries. Hence the formation in 1993 of the AAPAE, a non-partisan, non-profit national umbrella organization for all those concerned with applied ethics in its many forms.

The broad purpose of the AAPAE is to encourage awareness of applied ethics as a significant area of concern, and to foster discussion of issues in applied ethics. It provides a meeting point for practitioners from various fields and academics with specialist expertise. It welcomes everyone who wants or needs to think and talk about applied or professional ethics. The AAPAE also attempts to foster connections with special interest groups. The AAPAE does not endorse or support any particular viewpoint, but rather aims to promote a climate in which different and differing views, concerns, and approaches can be expressed and discussed.

The formal aims of the AAPAE, as stated in its constitution, are:
- To facilitate networking between individuals and institutions working or interested in the area of professional and applied ethics.
- To foster community discussion of issues related to professional and applied ethics.
- To encourage a focus on the teaching of professional and applied ethics.
- To facilitate the organization of conferences, meetings and other events in order to fulfill the above aims.
- To develop and distribute publications, including a newsletter and conference proceedings.

The 14th Annual AAPAE Conference, "Enhancing Responsibility," will be held on June 27-29, 2007, at RMIT University, Melbourne Australia. AAPAE welcomes practitioners, scholars, and researchers from various disciplines and professions for discussion of interests and issues in applied and professional ethics. The Convener and Chair of the conference is Dr. Michael Segon who can be contacted at Michael.segon@rmit.edu.au. Further details about AAPEA and the conference can be found on the Association's website at http://www.arts.unsw.edu.au/aapae/

SBE Board Election Update

By the time you read this newsletter you should have received your ballot for the SBE Board of Directors election. Due to unique circumstances, we are following a different process this year.

Bob Solomon's untimely death in January created a vacancy on the Board. SBE By-Laws grant the Board of Directors authority to appoint someone to fill such vacancies. Because we were just entering the nomination and election cycle, the Board decided that transparency in governance would be better served by conducting a single election for two seats rather than appointing a new member.

The By-Laws also grant the Board authority to establish the election slate and they require a 50% majority of those voting for election. To avoid the expense and delay of run-off elections, recent practice has been for the Board to submit two names to the membership for election, guaranteeing that one person would attain the 50% standard. However, we were pleased to receive many nominations this year and, given the unique circumstances, the Board has decided to submit all of the nominees who agree to stand for election to the membership and, if needed, conduct a run-off election.

The Board made one further change. Bob's term was for 2005-2010 and he would have served as program chair for the 2008 annual meeting. For a smoother transition and to minimize the challenges for new members, Rob Phillips' term was moved up one year; it will now expire in 2010 rather than 2011 and Rob will serve as program chair in 2008. This means that we now will be electing one person to serve a four year term (2007-2011 and serving as program chair in 2009) and one person to the normal five year term (2007-2012 and serving as program chair in 2010). The Board intends to work with the new members to allocate the seats in a way that is most convenient for those involved.

If you haven't done so already, I urge you to vote by returning your ballot before the deadline.

Joe DesJardins
Executive Director

BEQ Update

Business Ethics Quarterly started 2007 with several additions and changes in editorial staff. A full list of changes is described in the "from the editor" introduction to the January issue, along with publication statistics for the last year. Thus, I thought I would use this space to say a few things about the editorial process and the tasks performed by the various people serving editorial roles. Final decisions on articles and reviews are made either by one of the associate editors or by me. Associate Editor Al Gini is the final arbiter on reviews, and the other associate editors and I handle article manuscripts. Advisory editors in various subject areas are scholars that the associate editors and I call upon for help with manuscripts that stretch our own competencies. We might ask advisory editors for suggestions for reviewers for a particular manuscript, or ask for an initial opinion on a manuscript (i.e., is it good enough to send out for review), or ask them to help put together a special forum on a particular topic in their field, or request their help in a situation where reviewers are sharply divided on a manuscript's merits.

When a submission arrives, the editor (or, occasionally, an associate editor) makes an initial decision as to whether the manuscript is a reasonable candidate for full review by between two and four anonymous reviewers (usually it's three reviewers). Manuscripts that fail this initial screening usually do so on grounds that they either (a) are not on a topic appropriate for BEQ, (b) essentially repeat what already has been said on a topic, without contributing much new insight, (c) are more journalistic or "op-ed" than scholarly in level of argument and detail, (d) if empirical, make largely descriptive, rather than explanatory, use of the data, or (e) are not written with adequate clarity.

Having passed that initial screening, an anonymous copy of manuscript is sent out for review. We always try to have at least one member of the editorial board among the reviewers. In addition, we try for appropriate disciplinary coverage among reviewers; for example, a philosophy-oriented manuscript goes to mostly philosophically-trained reviewers. The mostly is important. We sometimes send manuscripts to a reviewer from an "outside" field, for assistance in determining whether the author has framed the ideas in a way that connects adequately with scholars from outside the author's specialty. Once the reviews are in, either I or one of the associate editors read the reviews, read the manuscript, read whatever else we need to (because sometimes we need to read further on a topic in order to make an informed decision), and write the decision letter. Decisions normally are either reject, revise and resubmit, conditionally accept, or accept (with the latter two almost never occurring on an initial submission; it is normal to receive a request for revision, and if authors receive a request for revision, it means they have made it past the toughest hurdle). A majority of decision letters are written by me, with Associate Editors Bowie and Schminke dividing the remainder (according to whether they are mostly philosophical or social scientific in subject matter).

Authors receive the decision letter along with anonymous copies of the reviewers' comments (and the reviewers receive each others' comments). Authors do not receive an evaluation form that reviewers submit to the decision editor, on which they rate manuscripts on criteria such as quality of argument, engagement with existing literature on a topic, significance of conclusions, importance of the topic, originality of ideas, writing quality, and methodological rigor (for empirical studies). Reviewers sometimes provide additional comments to the decision editor (e.g., "I've made many comments, but my first two comments are the most important with respect to whether the manuscript should be accepted," or "The misunderstandings and errors in the manuscript do not give me confidence in the author's ability to revise it successfully.")

Authors always should read the reviewers' comments in light of the decision editor's letter. Reviewers do not always agree, and the editor's letter often will give advice as to which issues, of those raised by reviewers, are most important to deal with. Also, the editors do not simply tally the reviews, pro and con, to make a decision. We're also evaluating the quality of reviews as we read them, and may discount a review if we think that the reviewer in some way has not done a careful and balanced job.

Authors invited to submit a revision also should send along a separate document in which they explain how they have dealt with the various issues raised by the decision editor and reviewers (e.g., if a reviewer says that you should have considered the implications of work by Abbott and Costello for your own thesis, tell the reviewer that you've incorporated a discussion of this work in relation to your own on page 23 of the revised manuscript). Please note: authors are free, in this response, to argue that the editor or reviewers are wrong, misunderstood the manuscript, etc., and so consequently no changes have been made in the manuscript. (Whether editors and reviewers will agree, of course, is an open question.)

In the case of a revised manuscript, the original decision editor reads the revision (and the author's reply to reviewers), and makes a new decision as to whether the issues and concerns prompted by the first version of the manuscript have been dealt with adequately. In some cases it's obvious. But in most cases, the manuscript is sent back out to the original reviewers to get their opinion on the revision, and the process is repeated. It is important for authors to do revisions carefully, as we try to make a fairly final decision on most manuscripts during the second round of review. That is, once we receive a revision, the most likely decision on it will be either rejection or conditional acceptance (i.e., accepted provided certain minor problems are fixed – e.g., "clarify the first paragraph on page 13," "add a brief discussion of the implications of your conclusion for thinking about topic X," etc.).

Once a manuscript is finally accepted, Associate Editor Gini (with a little input from me) is responsible for scheduling which articles appear in which issues, and he also works with the Philosophy Documentation Center during the production process for each issue. And that, in its basics, is the BEQ manuscript handling process.

Special Issue

Business & Society

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s Contributions to Management Scholarship and Practice

Submission deadline: August 31, 2007

This Special Issue of Business & Society invites scholars to examine the contributions of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. to the field of business-and-society and management. Dr. King is regarded by many as one of the greatest leaders of the 20th century. He challenged the status quo of racial discrimination by using America's historic ideals of freedom and opportunity in brilliant works, such as his "I Have A Dream" speech in August 1963 and his "Letter from a Birmingham Jail," published in 1963. His work cut across racial, institutional, and cultural lines by developing cooperative and non-violent strategies to bring attention to the struggle for civil rights, social justice, and economic well-being. Well-known events in which he played a pivotal role include the Birmingham bus boycott (1955), the "Bloody Sunday" march in Selma (1965), and the historic "March on Washington" (1963). Dr. King as a social activist, leader, and scholar focused our collective attention on issues of social justice not only locally, but also globally. He wrote that "among the moral imperatives of our time, we are challenged to work all over the world with unshakable determination to wipe out the last vestiges of racism. It is no mere American phenomenon. Its vicious grasp knows no national boundaries."

While Dr. King was assassinated in March 1968 at the age of 39, his legacy is extraordinary. Less than a year after the historic March on Washington, President Lyndon Johnson signed into law the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which banned discrimination in public facilities, such as hotels and restaurants, and also prohibited employment discrimination. The following year, the Voting Rights Act was enacted. It was to be followed by the Fair Housing Act to remove discrimination in buying and renting of housing. These two pieces of landmark legislation were accompanied by a host of other social and organizational changes, including affirmative action, which was designed to counter the legacy of discrimination and to promote social justice.

In respectful memory of the 40th anniversary of his death, Business & Society will publish an issue on Dr King's contributions that relate specifically to the business-and-society field and to management scholarship. Both macro and micro topics of scholarly importance are appropriate. We encourage authors to rely heavily on the writings, speeches, and demonstrated impact of Dr. King's work and to provide thought-provoking manuscripts that link his legacy to current scholarship most relevant to readers of Business & Society.

Topics that fit the special issue theme include, but are not limited to: progressive social values that Dr. King championed models of leadership (e.g., transformational, charismatic, servant) as exemplified by King organizational, social, and governmental strategies for ending discrimination the interface between social justice, social responsibility, and business ethics the role of corporate governance and accountability for social justice (or injustice) measuring the impact of social justice actions on corporate social performance strategies for incorporating lessons from Dr. King into the teaching of business-and-society and business ethics courses international dimensions of social justice within business-and-society relationships.

Authors are requested to submit papers electronically to both special issue editors. Manuscripts should conform to submission guidelines for Business & Society.

The European political project as well as its social model, both based on extensive stakeholder dialogue and consensus, have recently suffered clear setbacks. Europe is now defined by some as ‘the old Europe’ - a dinosaur on its way to extinction. The same seems to hold for the world of business ethics. Corporate governance, SOX, whistle blowing regulation, CSR, it is just a sample of themes with a clear Anglo-Saxon origin that dominate the business ethics agenda worldwide. And yet when we take a closer look we notice that all these themes upon reaching the continent are translated in a slightly different manner. European corporate governance rules differ from their American counterparts; whistle blowing legislation is on the rise but provokes discussions in France and elsewhere that are unimaginable in the US and the way CSR gets translated in Europe differs from its American origins.

This conference will ask the question whether there still is a European way of dealing with business ethics issues. Topics to be considered include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Legislating whistle blowing
- European corporate governance, does it exist?
- Business ethics and the Lisbon strategy
- European CSR policy
- The functioning of stakeholder dialogue
- Role of trade unions
- CSR and NGO’s
- Participation
- Developing business ethics in SME’s
- CSR for SME’s
- Diversity and women studies
- Public service ethics
- Financial ethics
- Teaching ethics
- Ethics training in organizations
- Supply chain integrity
- Bribery, corruption, nepotism
- Responsible leadership
- CSR and development

Contributions are invited as full papers or, alternatively, as 2-page abstracts. They should be submitted to the EBEN secretariat by email in a Word formatted attachment no later than May 31, 2007. The email address is: ann.vanespen@econ.kuleuven.be

Information on acceptance of papers will be given by June 30, 2007. Contributions of both academics and practitioners are encouraged. Please note that only submitted full papers are eligible for consideration for the special issue of The Journal of Business Ethics. If you want your paper to be considered please note "JBE" on the cover page. Since papers will be submitted to a peer review process, please make sure that it contains a cover page with all relevant information (title, authors, contact details, etc.) and that no author identifying information is included from page 2 onwards. Start with the title, include a short abstract of 100-200 words and use Times Roman font, 12 pt, double spaced and follow the JBE style guide for your references (e.g. Author, 1st and 2nd Author: 2007, ‘My EBEN paper’, in The Journal of Business Ethics 99(1), 21-32.).

Teaching track papers are also encouraged and selected papers will be recommended for publication in the Journal of Business Ethics Education; and, as usual, EBEN members are free to submit a paper on any topic in business ethics and its related topics. Paper presenters will be entitled to a reduced conference fee.

A selected conference paper will receive the EBEN Best Paper Award. The conference will take place in the historical university town of Leuven, Belgium. Many of the hotels as well as the major attractions are within walking distance.

The conference will be preceded by the Annual doctoral workshop, September 17 at the University of Leuven, which is being organized by Prof. Wim Vandekerckhove. The deadline for application to the workshop is May 31, 2007. Interested students are encouraged to apply for one of the limited slots by sending an abstract of their thesis, including name, affiliation and the intended focus of their presentation to: wim.vandekerckhove@ugent.be

North American Case Research Association

2007 Annual Meeting

October 18-20, 2007
Keystone, Colorado

Submissions of cases are invited. Eligible cases may deal with any topic in any academic discipline where dynamic classroom discussion is useful. Cases must be original work based on real events, real people, and real organizations, and must not have been previously published or accepted for publication elsewhere, either in journals or books. Submitted cases may also not be under simultaneous review for other conferences or publications. Cases presented in other workshops may be submitted only if they have been substantially revised since that presentation; authors should describe the case’s previous history in their submittal letter.

If accepted, the submission must be presented. In consideration of having a submission reviewed for the conference, authors are committing to having at least one author attend and participate in the roundtable discussions or paper and symposia presentation.

Each case must be presented by at least one author who participates in both the Friday and Saturday morning roundtable sessions. No more than two cases may be presented in the same track by the same author.

Submissions should be sent by email attachment to the appropriate track chair by Monday, June 11, 2007. Include one file with the cover page, submission form, and case summary or paper abstract. Include the case and instructor’s manual (IM) or paper submission in a separate file that does not contain any information identifying the authors. Symposia proposals may be sent in a single file.

Each case submission should be submitted to only one Track Chair; please indicate if it may be appropriate for other tracks. If a case does not seem to fit one of the tracks listed, contact the program chair. Submissions should include:
- Cover page showing names, affiliations and contact information for all authors, and identifying the contact person for all correspondence. Student authors should be identified as such on the cover page.
- Case submission form attesting to originality and the right to publish.
- One-page summary of the case for the Proceedings, following prescribed format.
- Case and "Instructor’s Manual" (IM), also known as the "teaching note."

Paper submissions for the "Teaching with Cases" or "Case Research for Theory Building and Testing" tracks may vary in length, but should be submitted with a separate one-page abstract.

Symposia proposals for these tracks are limited to two pages and should include program participants by name and affiliation, and time allotment requested. Ideas for proposals may be discussed with the program chair.

New case researchers may submit "case embryos" – ideas for cases still under development – for feedback from experienced case authors. See www.nacra.net for submission form and send to the program chair by September 10, 2007.

November 16-20, 2007
Maui, Hawaii

Please indicate your topic area and the area number in your email subject line. All electronic submissions (including detailed abstracts) must include email attachments in MsWord. Research papers in all areas of business and economics, as well as the topic areas listed below, are invited for presentation. Proposals for cases, workshops, symposia, colloquia, tutorials on current issues, and other special sessions, are also welcome.

Submitted papers go through a double blind peer review process. Authors, whose papers are accepted, will be notified by email. Accepted papers will be published in the peer reviewed Electronic Conference Proceedings.

Presenting author(s) are required to register for and attend the conference, and present the paper at the time specified in the conference program. Publication of multiple papers by the same author will be subject to extra charges.

All complete papers will be considered for Best Paper Awards in their respective tracks. Student papers will also be considered for award in the Student Papers Track. Conference best papers are eligible for publication in the special issue of the Indian Journal of Economics and Business.

Organized sessions on topics of interest are invited. Sessions include a chair and two or more paper presenters. The organizer is responsible for contacting session participants. Proposals for organized sessions should be submitted to abeai@up.edu for approval and scheduling.

Proposals for Table Discussions are also invited. Participating authors exchange and prepare to discuss all papers. The objective is to provide authors with detailed and helpful comments that may make their papers publishable in academic journals of their choice. Proposals for organized Table Discussions should be submitted to abeai@up.edu for approval and scheduling.

Topic Areas and Tracks include the following:
- Accounting I (Audit/Financial/Tax/ AIS)
- Accounting II (Cost/Managerial)
