

Call for Special Issues Proposals

The Journal of Business Ethics (JBE) is pleased to invite proposals for Special Issues related to ethical issues in business and society that bring something new or unique to the discourse in their field.

JBE's governing objectives for Special Issues are (a) scholarly excellence, (b) relevance to business ethics, and (c) novelty and significance of topic.

JBE supports diversity in all its forms (including gender, background, expertise, and geography). In terms of the relevance for business ethics, the following two editorials are useful:

- Focusing on Ethics and Broadening our Intellectual Base and
- Deepening Ethical Analysis in Business Ethics.

Prospective guest editors may also consult recent and on-going calls for Special Issues which can be found in JBE's Collections and Call for Papers page in JBE's website.

JBE will consider proposals twice per year with the due dates for proposals being March 31 and September 30 of each year. Proposals received after these deadlines will only be considered in the next round.

The Co-Editors for Special Issues in consultation with the Editors-in-Chief will review all submitted proposals and may recommend (a) acceptance, (b) revisions, or (c) rejection of each proposal.

Please refer to the Special Issue proposal guidelines on the journal website when preparing your submission. Feel free to contact JBE's Consulting Managing Editor at jbusinessethics@monash.edu if you have any questions.

Proposals should be submitted to JBE's Consulting Managing Editor of the journal at jbusinessethics@monash.edu and marked to the attention of the Co-Editors for Special Issues.

We look forward to receiving your special issues proposals.

Kind regards

Mary Sully De Luque and Glen Whelan
