

Research Professor
Business Ethics and Society Program
Mendoza College of Business
University of Notre Dame

The Business Ethics and Society Program (BESP) in the University of Notre Dame's Mendoza College of Business (MCOB) seeks a Research Professor (open rank; non-tenure-track).

BESP is an initiative in MCOB that seeks to explore the philosophical and theological contributions to an understanding of business in a just and humane society. It comprises several distinguished faculty from various disciplines, a dedicated undergraduate minor called "Business and the Common Good," and a growing number of students from a range of business majors. It complements students' major studies and partners with undergraduate and graduate units both within MCOB and throughout the University.

An ideal candidate would have:

- A PhD in philosophy, theology, business ethics, or a related field;
- An active program of scholarly productivity that bears on business ethics and a demonstrated ability to publish in business or business-related fields;
- Experience teaching interdisciplinary courses, including at the intersection of fields such as moral philosophy, moral theology, business ethics, economics, law, and Catholic social thought;
- A degree from or experience teaching in a business school;
- Enthusiasm for working with and mentoring business students in a mission-driven institution.

Because BESP is not a tenure-granting department, the Research Professor position would have teaching expectations and performance expectations similar to those of tenured and tenure-track faculty in relevant humanities fields. We are also open to joint appointments within the Mendoza College or in other departments on campus, at the discretion of the other unit. This position is not tenure-stream and would have renewable term contracts. Some summer teaching may be possible in some years, but not required.

In addition to teaching and research, the successful candidate would also be expected to participate in the BESP community, working with its faculty and students to develop a flourishing educational and social environment. Activities with colleagues might include planning and attending guest lectures and conferences, participating in workshops, and identifying and recruiting visiting faculty. Activities with students might include alumni engagement, mentoring, information sessions and recruiting, and planning and attending various extracurricular activities.